Many talk of Robin Hood who never shot in his Bow.

[This Robin Hood was a famous Robber, and storied to be an expert Archer in the Time of King Richard the First, about the Year 1200; his principal Haunt was about Shirewood Forest in Nottinghamshire.] This Proverb is applicable to all ignorant Pretenders and Braggadochio's whatsoever, either in Knowledge or Business. It intimates that bragging and boasting are common Impertinences in Conversation, equally among Travellers and Soldiers, as well as Poets and Painters, who never out-did Nature yet, but only in the Lye. But they who pretend themselves to be what they are not, will always be prating of what they do not know. So, Non omnes, qui Citharam tenent, Citharadi sunt, say the Latins; Πολλοὶ μὲν κερθνηκοφοροῖ, παύροι δὲ τὰ βάνχοι, the Greeks; and Molti parlan di Orlando, chi non videro mai suo brando, the Italians.

Robin Hood's Pennyworths.

This Proverb is usually applied to such as having gotten any Thing dishonestly, sell it at a Price much below the Value, according to the Proverb, Lightly come, lightly go; and Robin Hood is alluded to because being an expert Archer, and so coming easily by it, he could afford to sell

Venison as cheap as Neck Beef; according to the Latins, Aurea pro areis, and the Greek χρύσεια χαλκείων: but others on the contrary apply it to such as would buy lumping Pennyworths, still alluding to Robin, but upon another Consideration, viz. his being a Robber, who tho, as Camden calls him Pradonem mitissimum, the most gentle and generous of Thieves, when Cash run low, would have what he wanted at his own Rate, which his Chapmen were forc'd to take, or else he would have it for nothing.

This Proverb is usually applied to such Persons who for want of Penetration into the Consequences of Things, and of the Qualification of knowing Men, are often prevailed upon by the Artifices of designing Persons to do those things, which will in the Consequence sensibly affect themselves, while they design them only for others, deeming themselves secure: As also such revengeful Spirits, which prosecute their private Resentments against others with such an unwary Precipitateness, that the heaviest part of the Punishment frequently falls to their share. Ὅντ' αὐτῷ κακὰ τεύχει ἀνὲρ ἄλλω τεύχων, say the Greeks, and Ἐπὶ σεαυτῷ τὴν σελήνην καθέλεις; In tuum ipsius caput Lunam deducis, Latin.

This Proverb is not only levelled at a careless Groom, but has a more extended Aim; it intimates, that 'tis a mighty Imprudence to neglect the weighing of all the Circumstances of an Action, both as to Time and Place, before we venture upon doing what perhaps we may repent of in the Event to our great Shame or Damage. This is generally the Wisdom of the World, when the Thing is over, we are as wise as Experience can make us. Almost all the Miscarriages of Mankind are for want of Thinking: After-Wit is commonly dear bought, and we pay for it either with Misfortune, Anxiety, or Sorrow; for there is no unthinking a Misfortune, after it has befallen us for want of Precaution and Foresight: an After-thought may inhanse our Trouble, but can't relieve our Distress; it may prevent like Inconvenience for the future, but it cannot make any Satisfaction for what is past. Serrar la Stalla quando s'han perduti i buovi, say the Italians. Est temps de fermer l'estable quand les chevaux en sont alles, the French. Quandoquidem accepto claudenda est janua damno, the Latins. One Man had better steal a Horse, than another look over the Hedge.

This Proverb does not justify Stealing at all; it means very honestly, and is only a smart Turn upon all partial Proceedings, as well in private Judgments as publick Trials. It intimates that when great Rogues are in Authority, and have the Laws against Oppression and Robbery in their own hands, little Thieves only go to pot for it; and that inferior Pirates are punished with Death at the Gallows, while great Offenders live safe and secure under the Helm of Government. This Proverb is for doing all People Justice alike, from the highest to the lowest, and in all Cases whatsoever, either of Desert or Demerit. We live indeed in a thieving, cheating, and plundering Age: Coxening is become a topping Trade, only we have got a genteeler way of stealing now, than only to take a Man's Horse from under him on the Highway, and a little loose Money out of his Pocket: our Rapparees are Men of better Breeding and Fashion, and scorn to play at such small Game, they sweep away a noble Estate with one slight Brush, and bid both the Gallows and Horse-Bond defiance; and the Mob is not always just in this Point, for one Pick-Pocket deserves a Horse-Pond as well as another, without any regard to Quality or fine Clothes. But Dat Veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas, say the Latins.

He steals a Goose, and gives the Giblets in Alms.

This Proverb points at such Persons, who by Acts of Injustice, Oppression, and Fraud, amass to themselves large Estates, and think to atone for their Rapine by doing some charitable Acts while they are alive, or when they can no longer possess them, by leaving their Lands, in Mortmain, to pious and charitable Uses, as building and endowing Hospitals, Alms-Houses, and other Acts of Beneficence (commendable indeed, when done from a truly Christian Charity) but they who think, by thus paying Paul, to atone for their robbing Peter, entertain an Opinion highly disparaging the Justice of the Almighty: Parallel to this is the Hebrew Adage, לֹא יִשְׁלַח אֱלֹהִים בְּחֹרֶן עֵינָיו.

Well begun is half ended.

All the Actions and Enterprizes of Mankind labour under the Reflection of this quaint moral Sentence, whether they be prudent or imprudent in the Undertaking, and good or bad in the Accomplishment. It intimates that Persons should be very deliberate and advised in the beginning of an Undertaking; for that to begin well is the only way to quicken and dispatch the End, let it be what it will. It intimates that there is a great deal of Difficulty in beginning well, and that a false Step at first Start is hardly to be recovered afterwards: That the Work does not cost half so much Trouble as the Design of it; that it is an easy Matter to make way when the Ice is broke. It reflects upon false Foundations and foolish Projects. And it holds good from Morality and worldly Affairs to Religion, That a good Beginning is a fair Step to a good Ending. Dimidium facti, qui bene cepit, habet, say the Latins; and Ἀρχὴ ἡμισυ πᾶντος, Arist.

All is well that ends well.

It is plain matter of fact, that the End crowns all Things, and that every Thing is not to be judg'd amiss that may appear so for the present. A worldly Misfortune, if it quickens our Diligence and Industry; a severe Fit of Sickness, if it promotes our Piety, and makes us amend our Lives, is well, tho for the present no Affliction seems joyous, but grievous: For a happy Death is the never-failing Portion of a well-spent Life, which always ends in eternal Bliss and Glory. The best way of judging of Things, beyond Mistake, is by the Issue or Event of them. Finis coronat Opus, say the Latins; and, Ἀλκίονιδας ἡμέρας ἔχει, the Greeks.
